WANTED AT THE CROSS ROADS.

I was in a hurry to reach home. No wonder, for it was the wildest night I had ever known in all my life, and the country road over which I took my way was bad and dark as country roads in general. I consequently was walking at a great rate, with the collar of my rough coat over my ears, and a comforter tied over my soft hat and under my chin, to keep it on and to protect my ears, when suddenly a man stood full in my path and caught me by the arm.

"Hullo!" said he. "You're just in time; you are wanted at the cross-roads to-night!"

The voice was the voice of a ruffian. I fancied myself attacked by a highwayman. I stood quite still, and strove to protect him by my manner that I was able to project myself.

"What the deuce am I wanted at the cross roads for?" asked I. "Unless I choose it would be a hard matter to get me there."

But instead of producing a pistol and demanding my money or life, the man answered in an altered tone: "Beg pardon!—I made a mistake. I thought it was my brother, and wanted to fight him. Bad night, sir!"

"Very!" said I. "You don't know the time!" he asked. "It was seven when I left the train at L—" said I.

"Thank ye," said the man. "Good night!"

If his object had been robbery, probably he had decided, from my rough appearance, that I was too poor a man to be worth the trouble.

But after all, thought I, probably he spoke the truth. A man may have such a voice without being a highwayman, no doubt.

So I went on homeward, and soon found myself under shelter and partaking of a warm and savory supper.

My mother was there and my brother Ben. Ben was a great strapping fellow who could beat any other boy of his age for miles around if it came to wrestling or boxing, and as good humored boy as ever lived—a boy always to mother and I, though he had exercised his right to vote already in one Presidential election.

When supper was over and we had chatted for an hour, we went up stairs together. We shared one room.

The moment Ben's head touched the pillow he always went to sleep. That night I followed his example.

But I did not sleep long without a dream—a dream in which I felt a rough grip on my arm, and was roused by a cry in my ear:

It was so real, so palpable, that when I started broad awake I actually believed that some one was in the room; the man who had met me on the road perhaps, and who intended robbery or violence. But when I had arisen, and lit my lamp, the room was empty, except myself and Ben, who lay snoring on his pillow.

I went to the door; it was locked, I went to the window; the rush of rain against the panes was all I heard. I even went across the passage to my mother's room. She was awake; there had been no unusual sound she was sure.

Only a dream born of my meeting the strange man in the road, I felt had awakened me. I went to bed and fell asleep again. Again I was awakened by the same words; this time shrieked in my ear by an unearthly voice.

I was on my feet once more, and caught Ben's hand as he came toward my bed.

"What ails you?" he cried. "Nothing," said I. "Did you hear a voice?"

"Yours," said Ben, "yelling 'wake up; you fairly frightened me.'"

"Ben," said I, "wait until I light the lamp, I heard another voice. There must be some one in the house or outside."

So I lit the lamp and we searched in vain. "Nightmare," said Ben, when I told him my story.

"Ben," said I, "what is there at the cross roads?"

"A house," said Ben. He had lived in the neighborhood a long while, and I not long.

"One little house, besides two oak trees and a fence. An old man lives there, a rich man, and a bit of a miser, they say. His grand-daughter keeps house for him."

"Ben," that fellow may have meant harm to them. I may be wanted at the cross roads."

"Brother," said Ben, "go to sleep.—You had a nightmare," and Ben plunged in between the blankets, and was soon snoring again.

I also in ten minutes slept as soundly as before, but the awakening came again. I opened my eyes to see a girl standing at the foot of my bed—a girl in white robes, with golden hair all about her shoulders, who rang her hands and cried:

This time I started out of bed, bathed in a cold perspiration. I trembled like a leaf. I had no doubt that I had received supernatural warning.

"Ben," I cried, "Ben, for the third time I have been told that I am wanted at the cross roads, and I am going."

And I began to dress myself as speedily as possible, listening the while to the storm raging madder and wilder than at any other period since its commencement.

Ben remonstrated with me in vain.—At last he also began to huddle on his clothes. "If you have gone mad I must go with you and take care of you," he said.

"But fancy another man going in a storm like this to the cross roads because a nightmare advised him to do so, and what would think of him?"

I said nothing. All I could have answered would have been:

"I am compelled to go—I must go. I dare not refuse, whatever may be thought of me."

In ten minutes we were splashing thro' the mud and rain along the road. It was perfectly dark; now and then a blazing red star in the distance told us that a lamp was gleaming through the rain in some cottage window, but otherwise we would not have been conscious of our proximity to any habitation whatever. At last nearing the spot where the road from S— crosses the road from P—, we were indeed in as solitary a place as could be imagined.

The house which abutted on the very angle of the roads, called in familiar parlance the Cross Roads, was the only one for some distance in either direction, and certainly on such a night we were not likely to meet many travelers.

All was silent as the grave. We stood quite still. In a moment Ben broke out in one of his wildest laughs.

"Well," he said, "how now? Will you go home and have another nightmare?"

But hardly had the words escaped his lips when a shriek broke on the air, and a woman's voice, plainly coming from the interior of the cottage, cried:

"Help! help! help!"

"Ben," said I, "we are wanted at the cross roads," and then, understanding each other, without more words we made our way to a window, through which a light shone. A muslin curtain, draped the panes, but through it we saw an awful sight.

An old man lay upon the floor, and over him bent a ruffian, clutching his throat, and holding a pistol to his ear, while another man grasped a shrieking girl by the arm—a girl in a flowing night-dress—with such long golden hair as belonged to the woman of my vision.

Not a moment was to be wasted. Ben flung his weight against the slender lattice and crushed it in, and we had grappled the ruffians before they knew where the attack came, or how many foes were upon them.

I do not intend to describe the struggle; indeed I could not, if I would. But we were strong men, and inspired by the cries of the helpless old man and the terrified girl, we soon had one of the villains bound, and the other lying prostrate on the floor.

Then Ben started for assistance, and before morning both were in jail, Ben admitting, as we shook each other by the hand that we were "wanted at the cross roads."

The old man was not a miser, but he had saved some few thousands for his old age, and living more plainly than he need have done, had given rise to the rumor, and so brought the burglars to the cross roads in the hope of booty.

The girl, a beautiful creature of seventeen, was his grand-daughter, and as no story is acceptable to the lady reader without a flavor of romance, I will tell them that she became in after years, not my wife, but the wife of my darling brother Ben.

The Power of Truthfulness.

A TRUE STORY.

Once there was a good man whose name was John Kant. He lived at Cracow, in Poland, where he taught and preached. It was his rule to suffer wrong rather than do wrong to others.

When he got to be quite old he was seized with a wish to see once more the home of his childhood, which was many miles distant from where he now lived.

So he got ready, and, having prayed to God, set out on his way. Dressed in a black robe, with long gray hair and beard, he rode slowly along.

The woods through which he had to pass were thick and dark; but there was light in his soul, for good thoughts of God and God's works kept him company, and made the time seem short.

One night, as he was thus riding along, he was all at once surrounded by men—some on horseback and some on foot. Knives and swords flashed in the light of the moon, and John Kant saw that he was at the mercy of a band of robbers.

He got down from his horse and said to the gang that he would give up to them all that he had about him. He then gave them a purse filled with silver coins, a gold chain from his neck, a ring from his finger, and from his pocket a book of prayer with silver clasps.

"Have you given us all?" cried the robber chief, in a stern voice; "have you any more money?"

The old man, in his confusion, said he had given them all the money he had; and when he said this, they let him go.

Glad to get off so well, he went on and was soon out of sight. But all at once the thought came to him that he had some gold pieces stashed in the hem of his robe. These he had quite forgotten when the robbers had asked him if he had any more money.

"This is lucky," thought John Kant, for he saw that the money would bear him to his friends, and that he would not have to beg his way, or suffer for want of food or shelter.

But John's conscience was a tender one, and he stopped to listen to its voice. It seemed to cry to him in earnest tones, "Tell not a lie!" These words would not let him rest.

Some men would say that such a promise, made to thieves, need not be kept; and few would have been troubled after such an escape. But John did not stop to reason.

He went back to the place where the robbers stood, and walking up to them, said, meekly, "I have told you what is not true. I did not mean to do so, but fear confused me; so pardon me."

With these words he held forth the gold pieces, but to his surprise not one of the robbers would take them. A strange feeling was at work in their hearts.

These men, bad as they were, could not laugh at the pious old man. "Thou shalt not steal!" said a voice within them. All were deeply moved.

Then, as if touched with a common feeling, one of the robbers brought and gave back the old man's purse; another, his gold chain; another, his ring; another, his book of prayer; and still another led up his horse, and helped the old man to remount.

Then all the robbers, as if quite ashamed of having thought of harming so good a man, went up and asked his blessing. John Kant gave it with a devout feeling, and then rode on his way, thanking God for so strange an escape, and wondering at the mixture of good and evil in the human heart.

FAX ABOUT BUTTER.—I sincerely wish that the serpent that wuz so konspicuous in the fall ov our fast parents wood try sum ov his seductive wiles on the present hi price ov butter.

We went one week without it up to our hours, but at last giving wa to the clamors ov the children and the tearful entreaties ov mi wife, I bought half a pound and mortgaged mi house and lot.

Oh, a 4 row.

Butter is very skercra. Kows ar as plenty as ever and giv just as much milk, but the avaricious farmist packs his butter up for a big thing nex winter. Tha don't consider that the world may come to an end before that time and there butter spile on there hands.

A farmer bro't a teakup full to market yesterday and he kame near losin' his life bi bein' smothered to deth bi grocers who crowded around and offered him fabulous sums for it. I modestly offered him mi life and saked honor for half an ounce, and he askt me with a sarkastick grin if I tho't his butter wuz strong. That wuz a pretty strongly strongazam. He finally sold his butter to a man for $18 in stamps and a female dog. The cup wuzzen thrown in.

There hez bin sum very skaly butter in circulation within the past few weeks. I got a roll sum times ago for an old gold watch that wuz left to mi wife with the strick injunkun that she shoodent part with it unless it wuz to git sumthin to eat. We koodent eat that butter. I hired a powerful man to carry it far into the country and bury it. Cum to find out that roll ov butter hed bin made bi an agrikultural girl for an old flam uv hers in our plains. The hi flavor uv the butter wuz expessiv uv the strong luv she bore him. She had also sent him a lock of her hare very skillfully workt up in the roll,

Discovery of a Wonderful Cave.

A new and wonderful cave has been discovered in Armagh township, Millfin county. A correspondent of the Lewis-town Gazette, from Milroy, gives the following description of it:

On the 24th of April, while Charles Nageny, of Milroy, was having a site dug for a limekiln, he was surprised by finding an opening in the side of the hill. The moment it came to view a strong stream of air began oozing forth, like the pressing of a pair of bellows; the work was continued until the aperture opened in size large enough to allow the body to crawl in, and then it was found to be a splendid cave, with gorgeous subterranean ganges; during the week the work progressed, and a formal entrance was made. On Saturday, 24th of May, the citizens of Milroy and vicinity had the pleasure of a full view.

The attendance was composed of about one hundred and fifty ladies and gentlemen. Lights being at hand, having been furnished by Mr. Nageny, it made the affair quite interesting. After first entering, we found ourselves enclosed in a narrow underground path, for the distance of twelve feet; here the great cave came to view: the gangway about fifteen feet wide, with gigantic walls of rock, was a direct line of about sixty feet, in the centre of which we beheld the hanging or projecting rocks, in the shape of a mantle, underneath which were small, c y s alized rocks, long and hollow, appearing like icicles on a house in winter time. Here we turned to the right, and had a full sight of the "Platform Rock," a natural platform, about three feet above the level of the floor, and running together in the centre; above it was a shelf or canopy, which indeed presented a sublime sight. Here, one hundred and seventy feet under the ground, and in natural formed rooms or gangways, with a splendid spring of fresh water beneath your feet, who could not realize that the hands of nature had truly been at work here. A short distance farther on, we beheld the hanging lamp, and then came the subterranean chamber, situated below, where the rocks seemed to be more marbled, as they are firmer, whiter and more solidly settled.

After returning, we, with the assistance of a ladder, provided by Mr. Nageny, were enabled to take a look up stairs. Here was another chamber, with colossal walls of rocks, which presented a sight never to be forgotten; the distance traversed was about 600 feet. The air within is very warm, and the floor or ground seems as if cemented, and is firm and solid. The diagram is in the shape of an H written, and very neatly laid out. The base of the springs are like small pebbles laid aside of each other, with a border composed of a larger size.

The cave is situated on the line of the Milfin and Centre County Railroad, about three-fourths of a mile below Milroy, and is a grand and sublime sight—a relic of nature's handiwork that Millfin county may some day be proud of. It will be open for visitors, during the coming week, when all who may wish to improve themselves in the study of nature's works, may have an opportunity to visit it.

The Tribune on "Grammar."

We have had a few tilts with our polished and grammatical friend of the Johnstown Tribune during the last month. In his issue of May 8th the editor beats a retreat, leaving us in possession of the field—retreating, however, under a very heavy assumption of dignity.

After denying that John Hickman, a Radical, nominated and elected by the Republicans of Chester as a Republican, is a Republican "in good standing," our friend gets off the following:

"Our good nature and pleasing way of saying things, added to our superior knowledge of grammar and rhetoric, seems (?) to have worried our friend of the Freeman."

Here's richness for you! In the very sentence in which the Tribune editor boasts of his "superior knowledge of grammar," he violates not only purity of expression, but the plainest rule of English Grammar. And yet, the creature would lecture us on Grammar! Solomon says, "Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit?" There is more hope of a fool than of him."

But enough! We have shown that the Radical party is a proscriptive party, and has proscribed citizens "on account of race, and religion, and color," and the Tribune does not attempt to gainsay it.

The Vote on Impeachment.

It appears from the proceedings in the Senate on Saturday last that the only vote taken was on the eleventh article of impeachment. This is known as the Stevens article, having been prepared by that arch demagogue himself. The vote was taken on that article first, because it was supposed by the enemies of the President that more votes could be secured for it than for any one of the other ten articles, and because they believed that conviction on that article was certain. The vote on the eleventh article stood as follows: Guilty, 35—Not Guilty, 19. Like Mercutio's wound, this, although not as deep as a well nor as wide as a barn door, is enough.

After having taken this vote the Senate, as a Court of Impeachment, adjourned until next Tuesday, when a vote will be taken on the remaining articles. It is not pretended, however, by the Radicals themselves that the President will be convicted on either of them, their main chance for conviction having been placed on the eleventh article. This having failed, the remaining articles will share the same fate. The following are the names of the seven Republicans who voted with the Democrats for acquittal: Fessenden, of Maine; Fowler, of Tennessee; Grimes, of Iowa; Henderson, of Missouri; Ross, of Kansas; Trumbull, of Illinois; and Van Winkle, of West Virginia.

The President Acquitted.

When the eleven articles of impeachment were adopted by the Radicals in Congress the newspaper press of that party set up a concerted and systematic howl for the President's conviction. It was a matter of small concern to them that each Senator had taken a solemn oath to decide the case according to the evidence, and to do impartial justice. In the judgment of these intensely loyal editors the Senate was organized only to convict, and the deposition of the President with rail road speed, to use an expression of Benjamin F. Butler, was demanded at their hands. It was not a question of guilt or innocence under the Constitution and the laws, but merely a formal proceeding to register the decree of a set of Radical demagogues in the House of Representatives who ride on the whirlwind and direct the storm. The Radical argument is and has been that Andrew Johnson has been an obstruction in the path of Radical legislation and progress, and that the interests of the party required his removal. This allegation will not bear the test of scrutiny. Ever since Mr. Johnson succeeded to the Presidential office he has been confronted by a Radical majority of two-thirds, both in the Senate and House of Representatives. That majority, under the despotic leadership of Stevens and his associates, has passed over the President's veto all their favorite and cherished schemes to despoil the intelligent white men of the South of all political power and confer it on ignorant and uncivilized negroes. The aim of the present and preceding Congress has been to usurp all the other powers of the government and to strip the President of all his Constitutional authority. In this they have succeeded to such an extent as to degrade the office of President to one of mere form and not of substance. To remove Mr. Johnson, thus shorn of nearly all his power, was the object of the impeachment trial. Benjamin F. Wade was his successor, everything was to be political millennium was speedily to be ushered in. But in the language of the Scotch poet:

"The plans of mice and men

The Senate, after mature deliberation, and having a proper regard for their oaths and the testimony, have rendered judgment against the impeachers, and have declared by their verdict that Andrew Johnson is not guilty of the high crimes and misdemeanors with which he stood charged. This result, righteous in itself, is due to the firmness and integrity of seven Republican Senators who could not be intimidated from a conscientious discharge of their duty by Radical threats and denunciations. To assert that such men as Fessenden, of Maine; Trumbull, of Illinois; and Henderson, of Missouri, were influenced by any other than pure and patriotic motives in voting for the acquittal of the President is a foul and malicious libel on their fair names and unsullied reputations. And yet the charge of bribery and corruption is openly made against those Senators and their Republican associates by the Radical press. Duty, conscientiously and fearlessly performed, is a perfect shield of protection against all these poisoned arrows of buffed and defeated malignity. Loyal League societies may fume and fret and denounce—the Grand Army of the Republic may resolve and re-resolve that these men were corrupt, and that each one had his price, but the intelligent masses of the people will not so regard them.

When the excitement and political bitterness which have grown out of impeachment trial shall have passed away, and when the base and unworthy motives of the desperate and unscrupulous men who instigated it can be viewed without prejudice and through the clear, calm light of reason and justice, their motives will be vindicated and their names honored and respected, while the memory of their defenders will sink into merited oblivion and contempt.

A New Way to Convict.

When it became manifest in the Senate, on last Monday week, that at least four Republican Senators intended to vote for the acquittal of the President the Radicals resorted to their usual base expedients to avert the impending blow. Among the number was Mr. Henderson, of Missouri, upon whom the Radical members of Congress from that State called and modestly asked him to resign in order that the Governor of the State might appoint as his successor some one who would hasten to Washington and vote for conviction. That such a base and scandalous proposition could be made at all only furnishes additional evidence of the utter rottenness of the Radical party. If Mr. Henderson had yielded to this infamous demand his successor would have voted to convict the President, although he had not heard one word of the evidence. But Mr. Henderson, like an honest man, indignantly spurned the proposition.

John W. Forney, however, whose baseness is always equal to any political emergency, hit upon a more novel and yet more disgraceful expedient to consummate the Radical plot against the President.

There are now at Washington two men who claim to have been elected United States Senators from the reconstructed State of Arkansas. They were doubtless undertrappers of the Freedmen's Bureau in that State, one of them hailing from Pennsylvania and the other from New York. Forney proposed and even urged through the columns of The Press that the Senate should at once admit these two carpet-baggers to their seats in that body, and thus render the conviction of the President a fixed fact. Could any man who was not born a scoundrel conceive a proposition more supremely infamous than that? Nothing but itself can be its parallel, and its mere mention can only excite a feeling of shame and indignation. It was worthy of the "Dead Duck" and of the author of the Jamieson letter.

A man is on trial before a Court and jury for a high criminal offence. It is ascertained that ten are for conviction and two are for acquittal. These two are withdrawn from the jury and their places supplied by two substitutes who are known to be hostile to the prisoner, and a verdict of guilty is rendered. Would not such a proceeding shock the moral sense of any civilized and law-abiding community? And yet this is precisely what Forney wanted the Senate to do, and if it had been done we suppose the Radicals would have defended the outrage upon the ground of party necessity.

With the failure of impeachment a great many shrewd political combinations have suddenly vanished into thin air. Of course President Wade had all his Cabinet officers selected—several foreign missions now vacant were to be filled by his special friends and admirers—bright visions of fat collectorships and profitable post offices flitted before the heated imaginations of scores of hungry Radicals—Sheridan was to be reinstated at New Orleans—John Pope, the hero of defeats, was again to make his headquarters at Atlanta, and Sicks was again to be enthroned at Charleston. Such was the bright and happy future of Radicalism; but the stern and inflexible decree of the Senate has dissipated all these pleasing anticipations and turned the golden frow of Radicalism, like Dead Sea apples, to ashes upon the lips. Andrew Johnson is still President of the United States, and may yet write several vote messages.

—An expensively bound book of 950 pages, and costing $37 a volume, has just been issued at Washington. The total edition has cost the Government one hundred thousand dollars. It contains nothing but the letters of condolence on the death of Abraham Lincoln. Only a very, very great nation can afford to throw money away in that manner.

RADICAL RULE.

That our readers may understand how the Rump runs the machine of government in the Southern States, we clip the following from the Pittsburgh Commercial, a leading Radical paper:

General Grant's communication to the Senate to-day encloses reports from the District Commanders. General Schofield's report gives the whole number of voters registered in Virginia as 225,933, of whom 120,111 are whites and 105,822 colored; of these 4,417 whites and 12,887 blacks failed to vote on the question of calling a convention. Judging from the tax list and other data, the number of whites who failed to register is 16,343. There is no report of the number disfranchised in Virginia under the reconstruction laws.

General Canby reports 106,721 white and 72,932 colored voters in North Carolina, nearly all of whom voted. It is estimated that 19,477 whites and 3,289 blacks failed to register, and of these 11,686 whites are disfranchised.

In South Carolina there are 46,883 white and 80,550 black voters registered; 10,692 whites and 4,107 blacks failed to register. About seventy-five per cent of the whites are disfranchised.

In Georgia 96,333 white and 95,168 colored voters are registered, of whom 60,333 white and 24,758 colored failed to vote; 10,600 whites are disfranchised, and 8,500 colored to register.

In Alabama there are 61,295 white and 104,518 black voters, of whom 37,158 white and 32,947 colored failed to vote. There are no data to show the number disfranchised.

In Florida few are disfranchised and nearly all are registered and have voted. Number of whites, 11,914; blacks, 16,079. General Gillen says no data have been kept from which to ascertain the number of voters of different colors in Mississippi. In Arkansas 25,697 failed to vote.

General Hovey reports that 45,218 whites and 84,486 blacks were registered in Louisiana; of this number 50,480 failed to vote, but what proportion the General is unable to say, nor can he report how many are disfranchised.

In Texas 55,683 whites and 49,497 colored voters are registered, of whom 1,757 whites and 56,932 blacks voted. The number disfranchised cannot be ascertained.

THE REGISTRY LAW.—Legal steps are about being taken to test the constitutionality of the Registry act, passed by the last Legislature. Mr. Chalfant, of the House of Representatives, from Columbia county, declares that the journal of the House shows that the act as passed, contained but three Sections, while as printed in the Legislative Record and in the Pamphlet Laws, it contains twenty-one Sections. He charged in the House that it had been tampered with after it was passed, and asked that a committee of investigation be ordered, which, however, was refused by the Radical members.

The statement is a startling one, and we are glad that it is going to be investigated. The constitutionality of the law will be tested at the same time. Its sole object is to injure the Democratic party, by throwing obstacles in the way of the exercise of the right of suffrage by the poor men, the mass of whom are Democrats, and is in perfect consistency with the Radical policy of restricting in every way the influence of white men in the control of our government, and extending that of black men. —Lancaster Intelligencer.

IMPORTANT CANAL CONTRACT.—It is stated that an arrangement of much importance to the coal, iron and lumber interests of Pennsylvania has been consummated between the several canal lines on the Susquehanna river and its branches, embracing the Wyoming canal, the West Branch and Susquehanna, the Pennsylvania, and the Susquehanna and Tidewater canals. These several companies, together owning the whole system of canals draining the great interior of the State, and connecting it with tide water, have entered into a contract which takes effect immediately.

By this contract they respectively bind themselves to operate their canals as one line on all through tonnage, to pro rata all through tolls, and to enlarge all of their canals by the spring of 1871 to six feet depth of water. It is estimated that this arrangement will effect a reduction of one-half on the vast tonnage of anthracite and bituminous coal, lumber and iron which annually seeks tidewater by these lines, and will at once create an outlet for the coal of Pennsylvania, which will enable it to command the New York and Eastern markets, and thereby vastly extend the business and tonnage of the Susquehanna valley. —Baltimore Sun.

MORE FOOLHARDINESS.—Capt. Thomas Garrett and Mr. Le Gender, Professors of Language in the University of Chicago, will wake some morning and make themselves famous if they should succeed in crossing the Atlantic with their little twenty-foot life-boat, which is to be as light as a cork, water-tight, and even air-tight, on occasion, and incapable of capsizing. Their adventure would renew the daring of the first navigators of that ocean, whose pinks and caravels were not much more capacious than the proposed Chicago craft. The captain, and his friend the philologist, will no doubt become as renowned as the courageous climber who once got up to the dizzy summit of a steep in honor of King James I. His majesty shuddered at the sight, and cried out: "Let that man have a patent for climbing York steeple; nobody else shall interfere with him." The rest of mankind will gladly allow those foolish Argonauts a monopoly of his business.

—Land is now selling in the South from one to ten dollars the acre—fine cleared farming land. Why is it so cheap? Because niggers won't work it. Because they are supported by the Freedmen's Bureau, and because white men won't emigrate to a land where they are denied both law and justice, and where the nigger is either their equal or their superior.

THE GREAT AMERICAN HAIR PREPARATION.—Valued at home and abroad, a real Hair Restorer or Dressing, (in one bottle.) A great triumph of science. Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S IMPROVED, (new style.) Every Druggist sells it. Price One Dollar. [may16-1m.]

LATE NEWS ITEMS.

—An eagle swooped down upon a baby at Quincy, Ill., that had been left alone by the river bank by its mother, and carried it away, and it has not since been seen.

—On Saturday night salutes of one hundred guns were fired at Hartford, New Brunswick, Springfield and other places, in honor of the great Union triumph at Washington.

—Satrap Meade has agreed to pardon the seven young men lately sent from Green county, Alabama, to the Dry Tortugas, for committing an assault upon a notorious character named Hill.

—Ben Wade says he'll be d—d if he'll resign, and he wants to know what the d—d is the use of a man having a vote if he can't make something by it. This is a pleasant way that Ben has of conveying his views to pious friends.

—Mrs. Jane Kinney of Virginia, Warren County, Penn., recently became a grandmother at the early age of 31 years, she having been a mother at 16. The daughter has well followed the maternal example by doing the same at 15.

—The Supreme Court has fixed the 27th instant to hear argument of the constitutionality of the registry act, at Harrisburg; and their decision will, we trust, be delivered in advance of the actual operation of the most infamous political law that ever disgraced the statute book.

—It is stated that John Brown, an American sailor who landed at Valparaiso, Chili, a few years ago, penniless, friendless, and with nothing but his carpenter's trade to depend on, is now worth five million dollars, and lately loaned the city two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in gold.

—Some people in Hartford, Conn., moved thence by floating newspaper paragraphs, recently collected several hundred cats wherewith to feed the animals in a menagerie now on a visit to that city. The menagerie men refused to purchase, and the cats had to be turned loose upon the neighborhood.

—Bogus reconstruction is flourishing in the South like the green bay tree. With half the white men disfranchised, and the negroes voting twice, with Mongrel candidates to count the ballots, and shameless commandants to declare results, it is not surprising that the late "elections" have gone more or less heavily in favor of so-called moral ideas and immoral practices.

—The New York Times says: "Our stock of knowledge about Grant is constantly being enlarged from new and lively sources," and gives us an illustration of Grant's idea of clams, which is that they are "gutta-percha oysters." So now they have Grant's full stock of knowledge, embracing "horses," "pups," and "clams." The Times evinces a worthy pride in being the first to publish what Grant says on clams.

—Mrs. Ernestina Pohl hung herself at Dubuque, Iowa, on Tuesday. Some neighbors going into her house found her little children tugging at the dead woman's dress, as she hung from a nail, and trying to make her speak to them. Her baby was found unhurt, but covered up under beds in such a manner as showed that she intended to kill it. She was poor and had become low spirited in consequence of the failure of her efforts to procure her first husband's bounty money for their children.

—A cute chap in the sleepy town of Nodaway, Missouri, rigged up his whisky dispensing apparatus like a natural spring and employed a scribbler to advertise the sensation. The result has been that nearly all the newspapers of the country have been taken in by the phenomenon of a natural whisky fountain, bursting forth from between two rocks, looking like brandy, tasting and intoxicating like whisky, and likely to realize a fortune for the "farmer" upon whose premises it is. —Rather a still joke.

—A committee of citizens of Shanghai, Ill., report that more than twenty thousand dollars worth of property was destroyed by the last tornado there, and they appeal for aid for those who have been reduced to utter destitution, and are besides, suffering from wounds received by the fall of buildings. Two persons were killed outright; two others have since died; three are mortally injured; four are dangerously hurt; twenty six received various wounds, and the names of twenty-four others are given whose injuries are only slight.

EDITORIALS, LOCAL AND GENERAL.

The last Clearfield Republican rather blasphemously heads a local item—"More Dam Booms?" What shocking depravity! Here you taxed the ice cream at Bob Thomas' saloon? If not, go and taste it to-night. It will be found not hard to take.

Two original poems—one from our own gifted "Linnet" and the other bearing the name of "Veritas"—have been received and will appear next week.

The Cambria Iron Company have purchased the Bennington Furnace, in Blair county, together with all the lands, etc., thereto belonging. Price paid, $70,000.

The grammatical editor of the Johnstown Tribune is funny on a grave subject. In a recent editorial, he says: "The deceased was one of our oldest as well as most aged citizens."

A lad named Cunningham was drowned in the canal at Huntingdon on Monday evening last. Who last seen alive he was playing on the platform of his father's warehouse, on the bank of the canal.

Our over-the-way neighbor, Mr. E. Roberts, has broken ground for the erection of a new store adjoining the one at present occupied by him. We understand that he designs erecting a handsome and commodious one.

The case of Gillis vs. Pa. Railroad, growing out of the platform disaster at Johnstown, and which was decided against the plaintiff last December on a question of law, will be reviewed, before the Supreme Court at Harrisburg, on Monday next.

"The Flight into Egypt," an original poem, published by us a few months ago, and one of the most exquisite productions of that sweet little warbler, "Linnet," turns up in the last New Castle Champion without credit or comment of any kind.

Our friend and subscriber, Mr. Joseph Parks, of Conemaugh, recently put a bullet through the head of a pike which measured four feet and a couple of inches, while shooting fish in the Conemaugh river, a few miles below Johnstown. No relation to McKie.

Messrs. Convery, Goss & Vinson, of Indiana county, have purchased the Ebensburg Foundry from Mr. E. Glass, and will take possession on the tenth of next month. The new firm is composed of practical and energetic mechanics, and for the sake of our town as well as themselves we trust they will meet with abundant success.

A young man named Louth, employed on the P. R. R. in the capacity of freight brakeman, fell from the top of one of the cars, on Friday night last, at New Florence, and a portion of the train passed over and killed him instantly. The deceased lived near the scene of the accident, and was the support of a widowed mother and two small brothers.

The Hollidaysburg Standard, in its new dress and elongated proportions, is more "gay and incompressible" than ever, and we don't know of a single improvement in its go up that we could suggest, even if we assumed to be the model par excellence of typographical taste and grammatical correctness. The Standard is now one of the best, Democratic papers in the State, and we are glad to see it and its editor are both prospering. "Forever float that Standard ship," &c.

On the return trip of the Branch train, on Saturday morning last, the engine jumped the track, a mile or two from town, and after running a short distance, upset at the side of the road and plowed a hole in the ground some eight feet in depth. The engine was refueled at his post throughout, but fortunately escaped without a scratch. Other cars were dragged from the track by the locomotive, but luckily remained right side up. The road was obstructed until a late hour of the night, and no train passed over it until Monday morning following. The engine had to be sent to Altoona to be reconstructed.

THE LATE STEPHEN LLOYD. Esq.—The death of this gentleman requires something more than a passing notice. He was the son (the eldest son, we believe) of Mr. Res Lloyd, the founder of Ebensburg. Born in Wales, Mr. Lloyd, the elder, arrived here about the beginning of the present century, his son Stephen, then in his minority, accompanying him.

On the 26th March, 1864, was passed "An Act to erect and divide the counties of Huntingdon, and Somerset counties into separate county districts." By the sixth section of this act, Cambria county was erected from parts of Somerset. The act provided that the place of holding the courts of justice for the said county shall be fixed by the Legislature at any place not at a greater distance than seven miles from the center of said county, which may be most beneficial and convenient for said county.

After a struggle between Munster, Ebensburg, and Beula for the county seat, it was, by act of 29th March, 1865, fixed at Ebensburg. John Horner, John J. Evans, and Alexander Cagle were appointed trustees to receive the conveyance from Res Lloyd, John Lloyd, and Stephen Lloyd, for the purpose of erecting the public buildings.—Under the provisions of this act, a deed was executed for the property on which the public buildings now stand.

Stephen Lloyd, Esq., has never, we believe, since 1866, resided outside of the present limits of Ebensburg borough. He has occupied many positions of trust, having held the offices of County Treasurer, County Commissioner, and County Surveyor, and filled every trust with great acceptance.

Simple and unostentatious in his desires, economical in his habits, he did not become wealthy, for an easy competence filled his purse. He devoted a large family of children, and his family connections are of the most extensive in Cambria county.

Mr. Lloyd, at an early day, attached himself to the First Congregational church, and, as we understand, died in its communion.

He died full of years, and died, as he lived, without an enemy.

SPRING PURCHASES.—It is no longer necessary for persons to visit the great fashion emporiums of the East in order that they may make sure to obtain a fashionable wardrobe, or a nice suit of clothing. We do not need to say that there has been any necessity for it, especially for the last year or two; yet such are the attractions in other towns and cities—always held out by the merchants in those places—that our young men have largely patronized them, thinking that here at home we have no establishments which can furnish them with what they want. A greater mistake was never made. As a rule, our merchants are gentlemen of decided taste and enterprise, whose pleasure it is to supply their patrons with the rich and elegant fabrics constantly coming into market; and this they do invariably every season, both in regard to variety and style, and at as low prices as any house in the Eastern cities. It is simply because our people have not taken the pains to visit some of our leading establishments that they have kept themselves in ignorance of the fact that they can purchase more than home goods, and that they may pay in other cities, (and sometimes buy cheaper, too,) any articles of dress they may desire. One such establishment is V. S. Barker's Cheap Cash Store, Ebensburg, Pa.

Mr. Barker has just received and opened, for the Eastern cities, the largest and best selected stock of ready-made clothing ever opened out in Ebensburg; and as he has the latest arrival, he surely has the latest fashions. We were favored with a glimpse of this splendid stock of goods, and saw some entirely new cuts in cassimere coats, a suit of light-colored suits, and some very fancy cassimere suits, very cheap, and coats, pants, and vests in great variety, either in suits to match, or separate, as the purchaser may wish. Also, a new stock of dusters, ready for the summer trade. Next to the clothing department are hats. No person wishes to buy a suit of clothes without a nice hat to go with them. Mr. Barker, aware of this fact, has selected a stock of hats that we are sure will please everybody. He has some entirely new styles of hats, of the latest fashions, among the rest the "Stanley," which for style and beauty exceeds anything we have ever seen. It is a light-colored hat, so much worn at the present time, and a full line of black hats, both cotton and wool, for men's and boys' wear. Also, a new stock of straw hats. In boots and shoes, (like everything else in his line,) Mr. Barker has a full stock, for either men, ladies, girls, or children. For men's wear, we have a stock of both kid and calf, (both Congress and lace styles,) and something new in the way of a shoe called the "Sheridan," which is very nice for a light summer shoe. Now, when you have bought a necktie, or a fancy butler, (of which Barker has a large stock,) you will have a complete outfit, nice enough for any person in the world to wear. If you wish to get married, go to Barker's for a suit of clothes. If you wish to visit your friends, and want a nice suit of clothes, don't forget Barker's.

Our friends and subscribers, Mr. Joseph Parks, of Conemaugh, recently put a bullet through the head of a pike which measured four feet and a couple of inches, while shooting fish in the Conemaugh river, a few miles below Johnstown. No relation to McKie.

Messrs. Convery, Goss & Vinson, of Indiana county, have purchased the Ebensburg Foundry from Mr. E. Glass, and will take possession on the tenth of next month. The new firm is composed of practical and energetic mechanics, and for the sake of our town as well as themselves we trust they will meet with abundant success.

A young man named Louth, employed on the P. R. R. in the capacity of freight brakeman, fell from the top of one of the cars, on Friday night last, at New Florence, and a portion of the train passed over and killed him instantly. The deceased lived near the scene of the accident, and was the support of a widowed mother and two small brothers.

The Hollidaysburg Standard, in its new dress and elongated proportions, is more "gay and incompressible" than ever, and we don't know of a single improvement in its go up that we could suggest, even if we assumed to be the model par excellence of typographical taste and grammatical correctness. The Standard is now one of the best, Democratic papers in the State, and we are glad to see it and its editor are both prospering. "Forever float that Standard ship," &c.

On the return trip of the Branch train, on Saturday morning last, the engine jumped the track, a mile or two from town, and after running a short distance, upset at the side of the road and plowed a hole in the ground some eight feet in depth. The engine was refueled at his post throughout, but fortunately escaped without a scratch. Other cars were dragged from the track by the locomotive, but luckily remained right side up. The road was obstructed until a late hour of the night, and no train passed over it until Monday morning following. The engine had to be sent to Altoona to be reconstructed.

In urging the equalization of school taxes over the State, it is not because we complain of the enormous burden which we bear. We do not complain that we pay a rate of more than .012 per cent. for school purposes. A labor of love is never like mine; and the education of their children is the object that here at home we have no establishments which can furnish them with what they want. A greater mistake was never made. As a rule, our merchants are gentlemen of decided taste and enterprise, whose pleasure it is to supply their patrons with the rich and elegant fabrics constantly coming into market; and this they do invariably every season, both in regard to variety and style, and at as low prices as any house in the Eastern cities. Raise aloft the banner, boys—fling it to the breeze;
Let your voices ring from mountains to the seas;
Let the joyful news be told to maids and matrons fair—

A magnificent stock of dress and millinery goods of all descriptions kept in endless variety, and sold so cheap that no one can resist the temptation to buy. Don't forget Leopold Mayer's mammoth establishment, Parke's new building, Main st., Johnstown.

Truth goes naked, and yet there is no danger of her being arrested. It may be as well to remark, however, that Truth has the patent right in this line, and no public ingenuity would be tolerated for an instant, even if there was no secret institution in our country as the clothing store of E. Leopold & Bro., Main street, Johnstown, where ready-made clothing of every description can be procured at remarkably low prices. It is the naked truth to say that this firm sells the best of everything, and remarkably cheap.

Tax rule, it raineth every day;
The streets, they run like rivers;
Dark clouds obscure the face of May;
Cold winds give one the shivers.
A gloomy cloud sometimes will open.
For an hour, less or more;
And then the people of all folks
All rush to Shoemakers' store.

It is a mooted question which store in Ebensburg is the largest, the most convenient, and the most tasteful. Without attempting to decide this question, we make free to say that R. D. Davis' store is at once large, convenient, and tasteful—large enough to hold an immense stock of new spring goods, convenient enough to afford ingress and egress for a multitude of customers, and tasteful enough to please the eye and captivate the fancy of all who look upon it.

C. T. ROBERTS, in addition to being agent for Grover & Baker's and Singer's sewing machines, is also agent for the sale of the celebrated Howe sewing machine. There are many who pronounce the Howe the best machine manufactured. The public are invited to go and look at it, and compare it with the others. If you want any kind of sewing machine—a Howe, a Grover & Baker, or a Singer—go to C. T. Roberts.

Do not think that one part of your life is important, and another unimportant—that one part of your work must be well done, while another part may be slighted. Every moment of life, whether at work or play, demands the best that is in you. When you go to buy a bill of store goods, for instance, buy with all your might—where you can buy best and cheapest. Buy at Thompson's store.

MARRIED.
EASLY—SCANLAN.—At Carrolltown, on Tuesday, 12th instant, by Rev. G. Christy, James C. Easly, Esq., and Miss Josephine, daughter of Henry Scanlan, Esq., of Carroll township.

At last! The deed has been done, and done just as—Easly! We congratulate you, friend James, on the successful termination of this undertaking of yours—the undertaking of winning to your side one of the loveliest and most lovable daughters. The birds are warbling sweet notes from every spray; the roses scatter their fragrance upon the passing breeze. Everything, animate or inanimate, speaks of love, and happiness, and contentment. May the songs of the birds and the fragrance of the flowers be asking to you fifty years hence, and may an atmosphere of love and happiness and contentment envelope you and yours always. In other words, and in brief—"May good luck strike you!" So mote it be.

DEBTISTRY.—Dr. D. W. Zeigler has taken the rooms on High street recently occupied by Lloyd & Co. as a Banking House, and offers his professional services to the citizens of Ebensburg and vicinity. Teeth extracted without pain by use of Nitrous Oxide or Laughing Gas.

INDISPENSABLE FOR LADIES

THE OLDEST RELIC OF HUMANITY.—The oldest relic of humanity extant in the collection of one of the earlier Pharaohs, increased in its original burial robes, and wonderfully perfect, considering its age, which was deposited about eighteen or twenty months ago in the British Museum, and is justly considered the most valuable of archaeological treasures. On the lid of the coffin which contained the royal mummy was inscribed the name of its occupant, Pharaoh Mykerinus, who succeeded the heir of the builder of the great pyramid, about ten centuries before Christ. Only think of it! The monarch whose crumbling bones and leathery integuments are now exciting the wonder of numerous gazers in London, reigned in Egypt before Solomon was born, and about eleven centuries or so after Mizraim, the grandson of old father Noah, and the first of the Pharaohs had been gathered to his fathers! Why, the tide-mark of the deluge would scarcely have been obliterated, or the gopher-wood knee timbers of the ark have rotted on Mount Ararat when this man of the early world lived, moved, and had his being! His flesh and blood were contemporary with the progenitors of the great patrician! His bones and shivered skin are contemporary with the nineteenth century, and the date of the crucifixion is only about midway between his era and ours.

BUTLER'S BIBLICAL BULL.—The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Times gives the following account of the origin of Butler's scriptural quotation:

In his opening speech in the impeachment case, Butler desired to use the scriptural quotation: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," but could not recall the name of its author. He was preparing his speech in his office at his residence at the time, and one or two of his friends were present to whom he appealed for information. One gentleman said it was used by Daniel in the lion's den; another by Moses when he saw the Jews worshipping the golden calf; another by John the Baptist crying in the wilderness. But Col. Wills Shaffer cried out in his off-hand way: "Why, you blasted fool, what are you talking about? Do you want to spoil the General's great speech by your ignorance of the Holy Scriptures? I'm pestered on the Bible, I tell you. It was that old fellow that the Jews stoned; that used those words. Old Stephen; that's the man that used them. He made that prayer just before he breathed his last." "You're right, Wills," said the General; "I recollect it now perfectly." And so it was set down in the speech, and so it was delivered.
